

Dealing with difficult customers who do not understand the complexity of the job

Working in extreme weather conditions, such as high heat or cold

Physical strain from lifting heavy glass and equipment

Constantly dealing with broken or damaged glass

Limited job opportunities for advancement

Lack of recognition for the skill and expertise required for the job

Feeling undervalued by employers

Having to work long hours and weekends to meet customer demands

Dealing with insurance companies and paperwork for claims

Difficulty finding quality replacement parts for older vehicles

Working in tight spaces in cars to replace glass

Risk of injury from sharp glass edges

Dealing with difficult or outdated equipment

Lack of training opportunities to improve skills

Struggling to keep up with changing technology in automotive glass

Finding reliable suppliers for glass and tools

Managing inventory of glass and parts

Dealing with warranty claims and repairs

Balancing multiple jobs and appointments in a day

Maintaining a clean and organized work environment

Dealing with delays in receiving glass shipments

Communicating effectively with customers about repair options and costs

Handling customer complaints and disputes

Dealing with glass that is difficult to remove or install

Working with different types of glass, such as tempered or laminated

Dealing with tinted or coated glass that requires special care

Ensuring proper installation to prevent leaks or other issues

Dealing with glass that has been improperly installed by others

Handling emergencies and rush jobs

Managing time effectively to complete jobs on schedule

Dealing with vehicle manufacturers' specifications and requirements

Ensuring compliance with safety regulations and standards

Managing paperwork and documentation for jobs

Dealing with insurance adjusters and claims processes

Managing customer expectations for repair times and costs

Dealing with unexpected complications during a repair

Handling delicate glass pieces without damaging them

Dealing with difficult-to-reach areas in vehicles

Balancing precision and speed in repairs

Managing a busy schedule of appointments and jobs

Dealing with the physical strain of repetitive tasks

Handling glass that is custom or specialty

Dealing with glass that is difficult to source or replace

Managing customer inquiries and requests

Ensuring customer satisfaction with repairs

Dealing with unexpected delays or setbacks

Balancing the demands of multiple jobs at once

Handling the pressure of meeting deadlines

Dealing with unexpected costs or expenses

Balancing customer satisfaction with profitability